

COMPLETE LANDSCAPING

Moving into a new property or renovating your existing home can throw up many challenges. Financial reasons can often result in the garden being the last area to get a makeover.

This can often be a good thing. It is not until we live in a property that we appreciate how we use our gardens. Modern gardens have multiple functions; entertaining, children's sports, home offices or as completely maintenance free areas. Some areas may get early evening sun and suit a dining area, or you may decide a larger patio area to incorporate a hot tub is your ideal place to relax after a long day.

As often happens, while a home renovation project is underway the garden can quickly become overgrown. Areas lose their definition, edges disappear and patio slabs soon look tired and cracked compared with the new design of the property.

With busy work and family lives, artificial grass is often chosen as an excellent low maintenance option. From the initial free site visit, plans are drawn to incorporate all the client's requirements.

The first step with a full landscaping transformation is to find out from clients exactly what they require from their garden. Existing foliage is discussed to ascertain it's place in a new design. Budgets are set out so that the clients expectations can always be managed. From the initial site visit and planning stages right through to the project finish one experienced site manager will discuss schedules and be on site to guide the client and the site team.

As well as the installation of artificial grass, a variety of edging can be installed to house borders or plants. Upright Oak sleepers, horizontal sleepers, low brick walling are all options for framing the artificial grass.

Our teams lay patios and paths to create a seamless flow from the house through to the garden. Fencing can be replaced, shrubs moved, garden rooms erected and bespoke gates fitted to finish the project.

As sole contractors on a project every aspect can be carefully orchestrated to run smoothly, on time and within budget.
